

Uhl Log House
AL-V-B-113

The land on which this log house is located was settled by Charles Uhl in the last quarter of the eighteenth century. Charles probably built his log house in the same period. Although log construction was common during this time, the Uhl house was two stories tall, larger than the average log homes which were one or two room cabins. An unusual feature of the house is that it is built over a running fresh water spring.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Uhl Log House is located on a farm lane west of Kinkle Lane in the Arnold's Settlement area north of Mt. Savage. The two-story log house faces south, commanding a sweeping view to the Cumberland Narrows, several miles to the southeast. The farm includes a frame bank barn to the southeast, a frame smokehouse about 100 feet southeast of the house, and a frame maple sugar camp located on the farm lane.

The original log section of the two-story gabled farmhouse measures three bays wide by two bays deep. A two-bay square frame addition dating from 1906 joins the two western bays of the rear. A shed-roofed enclosed porch covers the eastern side of the addition. A facade porch is constructed with heavy square posts resting on rusticated concrete block piers. The south wall of the stone cellar is exposed under the porch.

An exterior stone chimney heats the west end. The facade entrance is located slightly east of center; 2/2 sash windows framed in plain flat boards light the house. Weatherboards cover the main section while German siding sheathes the ell. Standing seam metal covers the roof. The house rests on a fieldstone foundation.

A spring emerges from the hill about 25' northeast of the ell. A small stone shelter flanked by stone walls covers the spring. The spring runs underground and re-emerges in the northeast corner of the cellar. It runs through a concrete trough, then runs outside into a wooden trough. The stream again runs underground, then re-emerges near the barn.

The Uhl House displays a four-room floor plan with a central boxed stair. The ell forms a single room. The interior retains original ogee trim and both two-panel and six-panel doors, featuring deep raised panels.

The second floor plan is identical to the first floor. Beaded board partitions form all interior walls. The ell is divided axially into two bedrooms.

The original cellar underpins the eastern half of the house. A cellar to the west was excavated in the 1930's. The central wall is constructed of stone.

A principal rafter roof covers the house. Purlins are mortised and tenoned into four sets of 5" x 7" principal rafters; common rafters measuring 3½"x5" rest on the purlins. A mortised, tenoned, and pegged angle brace accompanies each principal rafter/purlin juncture. A large collar beam is mortised, tenoned, and pegged into a set of principals at either end. All members are hewn.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The Uhl Log House, constructed in the late 18th or very early 19th century, may be the oldest log building in the George's Creek Valley. The structure is located about two miles east of the Arnold's Settlement area, which was established in the late 18th century.

The dwelling may have once been heated by a central chimney. If this was the case, the replacement of this chimney and rebuilding of the staircase probably occurred by about 1830. The physical appearance of the new stair and chimney suggest this date, which is confirmed by the date "January 24 1830" which is written on the board wall of the attic stair. A flattened agee molding which frames the second floor windows also appears to date from this period. Other features, such as the earlier ogee trim and the six-panel and two-panel doors, survive from the original building period.

The floor plan is unusual among local buildings of this period. The principal rafter roof construction is unique in the George's Creek Valley.

The land on which this log house is located was settled by Charles Uhl. His name is on a 1788 list of settlers living west of Fort Cumberland on land that was designated as military lots. DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Uh1 Log House is located west of Hinkle Lane near the Mason Dixon Line.

The house originally consisted of a two story, three bays wide log structure covered with weatherboard siding. The log walls are approximately one and one-half feet thick. The house rests on a high foundation of random rubble stone with a plain water table. The gable flank roof is covered with ribbed tin with some tin shingles and snowbirds. Eaves consist of a cornice with fascia and close verges on the gable ends. A large capped stone chimney of ashlar stone is located outside end.

Two entrances on the southern facade include one nine light glass and frame door and one five panel one light door. Windows are pegged two over two lights with wooden slipsills. A hip roofed front porch on the south has four tapered square posts on pedestals. A gabled frame addition with german siding and a ribbed tin roof is on the north. A shed roofed porch on the east of the addition has been enclosed. The house is built over a running fresh water spring.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The land on which this log house is located was settled by Charles Uhl. His name is on a 1788 list of settlers living west of Fort Cumberland on land that was designated as military lots. Of the 4,165 fifty acre lots intended to be given to veterans of the Revolution, 636 were inhabited or improved by settlers who were given an opportunity to purchase them.(1)

Charles probably built his log house during the last quarter of the eighteenth century on one of the several military lots he owned. Although log construction was common during the time, the Uhl house was two stories tall, larger than the average log homes which were one or two room cabins. (2)

Farming was the prevalent way of making a living in Allegany County before mining began, as the soil was rich for the raising of crops. (3) The Uhls were relatively prosperous farmers who owned lands in Ohio as well as this property. (4) Their wealth is suggested by the size of their house and also in the assessments between 1798 and 1824 which show that they kept a fair sized herd of cattle and horses throughout the period. (5)

Charles left the house and part of his property, to his son Archibald Uhl. (6) Archibald sold it to George Harden in 1846.(7) Currently, the house is inhabited by E. Stuart Delbrook, various members of this family having owned it since 1895. (8)
